Baseball History:

Asa was raised on a 40 acre farm east of Terre Haute. Along with his brothers, he was tought the basics of the game from his father, who picked it up while in the army. The first record I have of Asa in the professional ranks is in 1889, while playing with the championship Terre Haute team, of the Indiana-Illinios League. NOTE: Asa is not in the enclosed photo, but as the news articals state, he played.

From 1890-1893 he played with various leagues, but it was his performance with the championship Sioux City team of 1894, that attracted Cap Anson of the"Chicago Colts" to his talents. Note: Asa had 22 homeruns that year.(dead ball era.) As you read the enclosed articals, on his trials and tribulations with the 1895 Chicago team, one gets the feeling that Anson and Asa had a difference of opinion, other than baseball.

From 1896-1900 Asa played with indianapolis. Of his four years with Indy, the team finished first or second place all years except for 1900. From my records and photos Asa played a few games with Kansas City and Terre Haute, during his last year at Indy. It is my understading that, it was the incresing talent of the Western Leauge, during this time period that finally got the respect from the National League. Which in turn forged the development of the American League.

During the fall of 1901, after his first year at Omaha, articals show Asa playing exibition games in Terre Haute, with Mordecai Brown. It was through this friendship that got Mordecai to go to Omaha in 1902-NOTE: see obituary, last page. From 1904-1907 Asa moves into the position of player coach and finishes his career in the Cotton State League.

The time period in which Asa played is in my opinion, one of the pivotal eras in baseball. From speaking with one of the areas past baseball historians, Paul Friz (member Indiana Baseball H.O.F.). I have learned that Asa was more than just a player, but yet a player orginizer, which to his opinion was the cause of Asa short stay in the National Leauge.(boy haven't times changed).

Inclosing I would like to thank you for reviewing Asa's career. If there are any unclear facts to this documentation please contact me for verifacation.

houses in Indiana dealing in carpets and household furnishings. It has been here so long that it takes an old resident to remember when it started. It has become so much a part and parcel of the city, has been so identified with its growth and development and been so non a part of all business progress that it is difficult to think of the town as existing without this old and reliable establishment. It has not merely kept abreast of the times; it has been progressive as well as conservative. It has been a pioneer and blazed the way. Moreover people know that it has a reputation to sustain and that they are sure to get the very best at the very lowest prices because this house cannot afford to tarnish its long-established reputation by permitting better or cheaper goods to be obtained anywhere in the state. An important announcement is made by this establishment in today's GAZETTE.

Very Risky Indeed.

To tamper with symptoms indicative of growing kidney disorder; to neglect for a brief time needful stimulation of the renal organs when their inactivity points, as it always and unmistakably does, to their eventual permanent disease, is certainly very risky indeed. This is, however, a risk that many perceptibly drifting into Bright's disease, diabetes, catarrh of the bladder, &c., constantly incur. So those who read, reflect, and heed the lessons of recorded experience, the advisability of using Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a diuretic, need scarcely more than a suggestion. No fact is more generally admitted by the medical profession and the public than its efficacy for the prevention of serious renal disease. The unmedicated excitants of commerce, no matter how pure, bear in mind, react prejudicially upon the kidneys when inactive. The Bitters subdues malaria, constipation and rheumatism.

G. W. Logan Appointed.

Garrett W. Logan has been appointed instructor in machine design at the Polytechnic shops, vice Chas. J. Elder resigned. Mr. Logan has been an employe of the Vandalia in this city for a number of years past and is a thorough and practical workman. He has had charge of the tool room of the shops for some time past and is well versed in machinery of all kinds. There is no doubt that he will make a success of his new position which is only a stepping stone towards something highe and better.

PEACH PIES.

The Locals Defeat the St. Louis Peach Pies Two Games.

The Sunday Game a Good One Despite the Muddy Condition of the Diamond.

There was a fair-sized crowd out at the ball game yesterday despite the rain and it were well paid by a first class game of ball. The diamond was muddy and the players slipped around at every move. Eiteljorg had the Peach Pies completely at his mercy and would have shut them out had they not borrowed Stewart, a home player, who made the only clear hit in the game and brought in the run.

The features of the game was the hitting of Conley, the work of Eiteljorg, Bright and O'Brien. The visitors made the one error in the game by allowing the ball to strike a base runner. O'Brien made a neat play when a bat ball was hit to him. As it struck him both feet slid out from under him and he went down like a load of bricks. He was up on the rebound and put the ball to Lotz in time to catch the runner.

The game was called after the seventh inning on account of darkness. The score was as follows:

CRONIN'S KILLERS.

The Judge Overrules Peremptory Challenges.

Rulings That May Hasten the Trial.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—The weary work of finding a jury for the Cronin trial was resumed before Judge McConnell this morning and from a ruling soon after the examination of talesmen was begun it would appear that the court is disposed to accelerate the work. Henry Sweet, a farmer from Glenwood, was examined and cross examined at lengths, and finally Mr. Forrest, counsel for the defense said: "I challenge this juror for cause, for two reasons: He has formed an opinion as to the existence of a conspiracy to kill Dr. Cronin and also as to whether or not some of these defendants were members of that conspiracy; and, further, that Dr. Cronin was killed in pursuance of the action of a certain supposed trial committee appointed by camp No 20, of the so called Clan na Gael society.

The court—I want to ask the juror a question before ruling upon that challenge. (To juror.) If taken and sworn as a juror, would you, notwithstanding the opinions formed on these matters, be able to give these persons a fair and impartial trial and a verdict exclusively upon the evidence received from the witnesses and the law as received from the court?

Answer—Yes sir.

The court—The challenge is overruled.

Mr. Forrest—Then we take an exception, your honor, from the ruling of the court, and we challenge the juror peremptorily on behalf of Beggs.

The same process followed with the next candidate.

At this rate the peremptory challenges will soon be exhausted. After a further examination of this juror and the noting of several exceptions to the courts rulings he was peremptorily challenged on behalf of Burke.

The Terre Hautes Win Two Games From Danville.

And Upon Their Own Grounds.—Davenport Today.

The Terre Hautes won the second game from Danville yesterday in the face of the umpire, crowd, ball club and all, and illustrated the fact that they are the best ball players. Rifenberrick, the young pitcher who pitched for Champaign this summer, was in the box for Danville and played good game. Schneider caught and Stewart played second. Dorsey made a fine catch of a line hit and Prescott and G. Rost also made nice stops. The score:

THE LONDON STRIKE.

The Settlement of It Still Hangs Fi

LONDON, Sept. 9—The Lord Mayor of London, Bishop Temple and Cardinal Manning have written a joint letter in which they recount the negotiations conducted by them with the dock companies with a view to the settlement of the strike. They express surprise at the strikers' repudiation of the terms agreed to by the dock companies and declare their opinion that if the men continue the strike they will forfeit the sympathy hitherto accorded them.

The strikers held another large meeting in Hyde park yesterday. The proceedings were orderly. Mr. Burns, in a speech, declared it was a mistake to suppose that he had agreed to the proposal of the arbitrators. He invited the strikers to declare whether or not they would accept the proposal. A loud shout of "No" went up from the crowd. Mr. Burns, continuing, said the strike committee were prepared to hold out for three weeks more, but he believed the directors of the dock companies would concede the strikers' terms before another week had passed.

Mr. Tillet visited the Lord Mayor last evening, and proposed new terms to commence in October. The Lord Mayor demurred, but promised to use his best endeavors to persuade the dock directors to agree to the terms. It is probable that a compromise will soon be arranged on the basis of increased wages, beginning in November. The Lord Mayor told Mr. Tillet that he and Mr. Burns ought to have resigned when the men declined to accept the compromise. Mr. Tillet explained that the compromise was rejected because it would have created difficulty with the wharfingers, who had already conceded six pence.

RAILROAD AFFAIRS.

C. & E. I. Railroad and Block Coal Operators Finally Agree.

The numerous conferences between the officials of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad and Brazil block coal operators which have been held during the past few weeks has resulted in an agreement being reached. The parties to the controversy control 80 per cent of the annual output of 1,250,000 tons of coal mined in the Indiana block field. By the agreement the railroad company and operators are to share equally in the profits on coal sold in the Chicago market.

The railroad company had been insisting on $1 10 a ton freight to Chicago, notwithstanding that the Brazil Block Coal Co., which has the largest output of any company in the field, is owned by Chicago & Eastern Illinois people. The operators remonstrated, and repeated conferences have been held with the railroad managers without avail until this week. After several days' conference the agreement referred to has all but been signed. The operators say that owing to the persistency of the railroad company in demanding the high freight rate they have lost considerable of their trade. Not less than 75,000 tons have been signed away from them in the past few weeks by customers who had been taking block coal regularly for years. Recently, while these negotiations were on, the output for a given time was 10,000 tons, as against 71 000 for the same time a year ago. The miners have not averaged more than two days' work in a week. It is thought the industry will begin to revive by the 15th of this month. The railroad company, under the interstate law, has to give five days' notice of a reduction in freight rates. The company has fixed upon a rate which is said to be at cost, and the operators have agreed to a cost price at the mines. The two added together make the cost price in Chicago, and all received above that will be equally divided. The operators representing the 20 per cent output who are not in the new deal will go to different markets or to Chicago the best they can, there being some talk of the Big Four and Monon making a competing rate.

The B. of L. F. Headquarters.

The action of the Harrisburg convention in ordering the B of L F. headquarters moved has caused a little story to leak out which is of interest to all Terre Hauteans. Prior to the Cincinnati convention a movement was on foot to introduce a resolution providing for a small assessment to be used in a few years to erect a handsome building in Terre Haute into which the headquarters would be permanently moved.

CAPTAIN ASA STEWART.

Terre Haute Boy Who Played Good Ball for Sioux City.

Al Spinx, writing to The Sporting News from Sioux City, has the following to say of our own Asa Stewart, who as captain piloted the team to victory in the Western League race:

The Husker guard of the second bag is undoubtedly the best man playing that position in the league. His fielding average does not convey an adequate idea of his ability, and only those who saw him play can judge best of his standing. Like all players, he has had his off days, and seemingly forgot a few things, but his often brilliant playing in the field, at the bat and on the base lines made him what he was in the estimation of the best critics. He covered a remarkable amount of territory, and if he made an error it was usually on something very easy. Then just to show what he could do, a seemingly safe hit was captured and the lost prestige retrieved. On the coaching lines Stewart was the star of the league, and his advent into the big circuit will rob several old timers of coaching honors that have long rested on their shoulders. Stewart succeeded Joe Walsh as captain of the Husker band. Captain Stewart is 25 years old, 5 feet 10 inches in height, and is a remarkably well developed player, weighing about 176 pounds. The Terre Haute, Ind., ball fields are responsible for Stewart's development, for when not working in an iron mill he was cavorting on the diamond. It was not until 1892 that Asa joined the professional ranks. Then he went to Oshkosh, Wis., and played a very successful season. In 1893 Stewart began with Easton, Pa., but was soon sold to Montgomery, Ala., in the Southern League, and ranked as the leading second baseman of the circuit. Stewart will join the Chicagos next spring, and nothing but hard luck will prevent his becoming the cracker jack of the big league.

TO-DAY'S LITTLE ROCK RACE.

A Good Field Promised for the So-Called "Derby"—Strauss' Pair Favorite—The Track Will Probably Be Fast —Other Turf News.

Special to the Chicago Record.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 31.—From present indications the horses that are likely to compose the field in the Little Rock Derby to-morrow afternoon and the probable jockeys, with weights, are as follows:

Horses.	Jockeys.	Wt.
Shieldbearer	Graham	122
Glad	J. Reagan	122
G. B. Morris	Bergen	115
Laureate	A. Clayton	119
Lobengula	Noble	115
Moderocio	Knapp	117
El Capitan	C. Weber	115
Pepper	Brooks	115
Bob Clampett	Choro	115

It rained hard yesterday afternoon and this morning, and it looked as though the races would be run in the mud, but the track is made of sand and the heavy rains had no effect on it. It should be faster than ever when they go to the post for the big event. In the local pooling in the Derby Gus Strauss' entry, Shieldbearer and Glad, sell favorite at $10, with Green Morris' pair second choice at $5. The latter has Moderocio and Lobengula, and, judging from the talk of horsemen, the former should win.

Work of the Candidates.

The best local work recorded by the Derby candidates was that of Glad and El Capitan. The pair worked a mile together in 1:45 flat, the fractions being :54½, :52, 1:17. Bob Clampett went an easy mile in 1:46, and Moderocio was breezed the same distance in 1:49. None of the other candidates was worked. Sallie Cliquot, a fine-looking 2-year-old by Salvator, went a half in :51½.

A special train from Memphis arrived yesterday with horses for Ed. Corrigan, Eugene Leigh, Tom Kiley, G. Walbaum and Andy Blakely. Jim McCormick has charge of the Walbaum string. The sporting resorts are crowded with horsemen from all points and the indications are that the attendance will surpass that of any year previous. Most of the big business houses close at noon to-morrow so their employés can go to the Derby.

Edward Corrigan will start G. B. Morris in the big event and says he would like to win and will if the others are willing to let him. The famous turfman said he was like a politician, "in the hands of his friends."

During the week the association will give two jumping races, and as they are a new feature here much interest is centered in them. J. H. Caldwell will handle the starter's flag and T. M. Apperson will be in the judges' stand.

PROSPECT OF RAIN AT NASHVILLE.

Cumberland Park Meeting Will Begin To-Day—The Green Briar Stake.

Special to the Chicago Record.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 31.—The spring meeting at Cumberland park commences to-morrow and, notwithstanding the clash with Little Rock and Memphis, there is a larger number of horses here than ever before. At Cumberland park and West Side there are between 700 and 800 horses, and they compose the pick of the western turf. The meeting will last twenty-four days and $70,000 will be hung up in stakes and purses. Jack Price will be the presiding judge, while Col. Hatch of St. Louis will handle the flag.

OXFORD'S TWENTY-EIGHTH VICTORY.

The Dark Blue Again Triumphs Over Cambridge's Light Blue on the Thames.

LONDON, March 31.—All London almost turned out yesterday to see the Oxford crew win its twenty-eighth victory from Cambridge. The dark blue colors crossed the winning line at Mortlake a length and a half ahead, the official time of the winning boat being 20:5. The course was from opposite the star and garter hotel at Putney to the finish line 150 yards above the Ship inn at Mortlake, a distance of four miles, one furlong and 150 yards. No such a bank of faces ever lined the Thames. As on previous years most of the spectators were of the middle

PLAY WITH GREAT VIM

STEWART HELPS THE CHICAGOS.

Louisville Defeated at Houston by a Score of 5 to 3—Anson's Men Do Sharp Work— All the Runs Are Earned— Other Baseball Contests.

Special to the Chicago Record.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 31.—"I have not seen the Chicagos play with such ginger and life in years as they have to-day," said Jimmy Ryan after the game to-day in which Chicago beat Louisville 5 to 3. "This man Stewart will be worth many a game this summer," Ryan continued. He was evidently correct. The work of the Colts was little short of marvelous, and their hurrah action, started by "Ace" Stewart, was the cause of Louisville's downfall. From the moment play was called the clever second baseman was an important factor. His "foghorn" coaching and witticisms put new life into his fellow-players and started them all on the same tack. Before the third inning was finished the Colonels were a cowed, beaten and dejected lot. It was a case of "jolly" all the way along with the Colts. There was coaching and chattering on the lines at all times, daring base-running and brilliant fielding and wicked hitting. Even "Your Uncle" took a hand in the uproar. The Colonels could not stand the pace set, and though they fielded well they threw up their hands before the game was half over. McDermott was the only one who kept his head, and it was his great pitching that held the Colts down to single figures. From "rooting" for the Kentucklans the crowd turned to cheering the World's Fair city lads, and every time one of them came to the plate he received an ovation.

SECOND BASEMAN STEWART.

How the Runs Were Made.

Chicago began the run-getting in the first inning. After Ryan flew out to center Dahlen hit safe and took third on Decker's single to right. Decker following on to second by a steal. Both scored on Lange's liner past second. Glasscock's double, singles by Preston and Luby and McDermott's fly to Ryan made the Colonels even in the second. Chicago got two men on bases in the fourth and none out, but good fielding kept them from scoring. A good bunch of runs came the next trip. Ryan retired on his fly to Shugart. Dahlen singled past short and Decker was thrown out from third. Dahlen crossed the plate on Anson's two-bagger to Clark's territory. Lange followed with a rap over Shugart's head that netted three bases, and Everitt's hot grounder between Glasscock's legs enabled "Auld Lang Syne" to reach the rubber. Luby's single and McDermott's triple in the fifth gave Louisville her last run. The game was remarkable for the number of fast plays. Four of Lange's put-outs were long chases to deep center, and he was nearly lost in the horizon when his speedy throw completed a fine double play. Ryan's catch was a hard running one into Stewart's neighborhood in the face of the sun. Stewart and Donahue were "halcera" in a lightning double play on a strike out and an attempted steal. Then a double play by Stewart, Dahlen and Anson gave the spectators a touch of heart disease. O'Brien was on first when Glasscock hit toward right. Stewart headed off the ball, but as he grabbed it he fell on his side. He had hardly hit ground before he tossed the ball to Dahlen, who covered second and shot it over to Anson ahead of Glasscock. The crowd veiled itself hoarse over the play, and even the Louisville players took off their caps to him.

Witnessed by a Big Crowd.

Decker, Anson and Everitt got their share of good work. Everitt's single error in the third was redeemed a minute later by a fine one-handed stop that caught the runner and retired the side. The Colts' short and long battery work was faultless. Preston, McDermott and Shugart performed clever fielding feats for Louisville. The day was roasting hot and 5,000 witnessed the con-round [illegible] almost a knock-out. Leon re- this, however, and in the next riskingly well, scoring a knockdown have been a knockout with most it was the more aggressive through- fault being a waste of energy in s but wild swings. PROSPECT OF RAIN AT NASHVILLE.

Cumberland Park Meeting Will Begin To-Day—The Green Briar Stake.

Special to the Chicago Record.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 31. The spring meeting at Cumberland park commences to-morrow and, notwithstanding the clash with Little Rock and Memphis, there is a larger number of horses here than ever before. At Cumberland park and West Side there are between 700 and 800 horses, and they compose the pick of the western turf. The meeting will last twenty-four days and $70,000 will be hung up in stakes and purses. Jack Price will be the presiding judge, while Col. Hatch of St. Louis will handle the flag.

The event for to-morrow will be the Green Briar stake, with a guaranteed value of $2,500 at one mile. Among the entries are Rasper, Renaud, Curator, Brendoo, Buck Massie, Pelleus, Canewood, Trenton, Montre, Doctor, Diggs, Potsdam, Rainmaker, Prime Minister and Fancy Dance. Diggs, who has been specially prepared for the event, is the favorite. He arrived this morning from Louisville and is in the best possible condition. Prime Minister, who has been trained at Montgomery, Ala., has a strong following, and the good son of Bishop has shown up exceedingly well in his work. Tommy Griffin's Rasper is by no means overlooked, and with Charlie Thorpe in the saddle he is supposed to have a reasonably good chance. Probably the best betting race of the day will be the first, at six furlongs. The entries embraced Carlsbad, Terrapin, Mollie B., Lottie Mills, Metropole, Simon W. and other good ones. Terrapin, on his recent performance at New Orleans, is the best thought of.

The weather is cloudy to-night, with prospects of rain.

GIVEN RAPID WORK AT LEXINGTON.

Six Furlongs in 1:16 3-4 Recorded—Strauss' Big Lot of 2-Year-Olds.

Special to the Chicago Record.

LEXINGTON, Ky., March 31. The weather was summerlike this morning and every thoroughbred in training at the association track here was sent along in his work. The fastest moves of the season were made. Lieut. Jackson's pair of maidens, both 3-year-olds, by Duke of Montrose and Logic, respectively, worked three-quarters together with 110 pounds up, in 1:16¾, the best time made at the distance here this spring. The Devil covered the same distance in 1:17. Byron McClelland's horses all took fast work except Cæsarian, who was given a let-up. Will Wallace brushed The Commoner, and several of his 2-year-olds through the stretch at a lively gait. The strings of Bradley Bros. and Crater Bros. moved well, but no sensational time was made. The Strauss stable, comprising twenty-five 2-year-olds, all received strong work preparatory to their shipment to Sheepshead Bay this week. The stables of Joe Chinn and Lieut. Jackson are far advanced; also the Iroquois and Himyar stables.

Gus Strauss has gone to Little Rock, where he has Shieldbearer in the Derby and a 2-year-old in the Capital stake. Ed Graves accompanied him. Harry Lauderman and Milt Thompson left for Nashville to-day and Eugene Porter went to Memphis. Shieldbearer is the talent's pick for the Arkansas Derby, while Diggs will be backed off the boards by the Lexington contingent in the Green Briar stake at Nashville. The Lexington book programme has just been issued.

Still Another Book on the Derby.

Levy, Mayer & Co. are in the field with a book on the Chicago Derby. Lissak is held favorite at 8, with Diggs at 10. B. Morris, Leo Lake, Potsdam, Rey del Carreara, Rey Alfonso, Satsuma, Victor and Longfellow-Belle Knight colt; 60 Halma; 75 Monaco, Alamo and Monterey; 100 to 500 the others.

Notes of the Tracks.

The Fleischmanns are evidently ambitious to become the Keenes of the western turf. It is said they will buy Diggs. Last year they won considerable money, but spent more than they won in buying horses to strengthen their stable. George V. Hankins says he has heard nothing of the Fleischmann deal for Diggs and doubts if there is anything in the report. He says though that Diggs is for sale as is any other horse in the stable, he does not think they will part with him. Diggs is a full brother to Hankins' Dandelion, 111 each; Bluestone, Doubtful, Princeton, 114 each.

OXFORD'S TWENTY-EIGHTH VICTORY.

The Dark Blue Again Triumphs Over Cambridge's Light Blue on the Thames.

LONDON, March 31. All London almost turned out yesterday to see the Oxford crew win its twenty-eighth victory from Cambridge. The dark blue colors crossed the winning line at Mortlake a length and a half ahead, the official time of the winning boat being 20:50. The course was from opposite the Star and Garter inn at Putney to the finish line 120 yards above the Ship inn at Mortlake, a distance of four miles, one furlong and 180 yards. No such a bank of faces ever lined the Thames. As in previous years, most of the spectators were of the middle or working class, but thousands of representatives of the aristocracy had preempted quarters on the gayly decorated launches or occupied vantage spots on four-in-hands on land. Everybody wore a color, and it appeared as though public favor was about equally divided between the Oxonian dark blues and the light blue of the Cantabs. Both crews had taken practice spins early in the day. Oxford won the toss and chose the Surrey side of the river. The betting just previous to the start was 9 to 2 on Oxford.

The crews started at 4:08 p. m., and Oxford soon had a lead of half a length. At Chasper's boat-house Oxford held her lead, but at Craven cottage, less than three-quarters of a mile from the start, Oxford was only a quarter of a length ahead, and at Walden's the dark-blue boat had not increased this lead. At Hammersmith bridge, a little over one and three-quarter miles from the start, Oxford had increased the lead to half a length and was widening the gap. At Thornycroft's, about three miles from the start, Oxford was a length and a quarter ahead, and at the Devonshire Meadows the dark blue was leading by two lengths. Oxford at Barnes bridge, slightly over three and one-half miles from the start, held the lead of two lengths, and this was cut down one quarter before the finish. Oxford started at forty strokes to the minute, the Cambridge stroke contenting himself with thirty-eight. The dark blues throughout the race pulled steadily and like clockwork. Opposite Lead Mills Cambridge drew up a little, but the hopes of the admirers of the light blue men faded away, and Oxford increased her lead as she lifted. Opposite the buoys, about two miles from the start, Oxford was pulling thirty-nine and Cambridge thirty-eight strokes to the minute.

The contest up to Craven Steps was not very exciting, but Pitman, the Oxford stroke, then settled well down to his work. Wauchope, the Cambridge stroke, however, also put in a lot of good work and when both boats took a shoot for the Surrey shore, the battle was fought obstinately, and in spite of the tremendous efforts of Pitman, Oxford gained the little advantage. At the same time the long, dragging stroke of the dark blues began to tell, and, realizing the aspect of affairs, Wauchope made a big effort, but it did not last, and again Oxford drew away. As the boats proceeded up Chiswick Mall Wauchope continually spurted, not giving his opponents a rest. In the broken water in Corney Reach the superior style of the Oxford crew again told. Up to this point Cambridge had made a gallant fight, but after passing Thornycroft's the race became little more than a procession. Cambridge, nevertheless, never relaxed its efforts, but the Oxfords seemed to have the measure of their opponents at every critical point of the race.

Many Noted Pedestrians in the City.

This city just now has its full share of pedestrians of greater or less reputation. Dan O'Leary, "Old Sport" Campana and Henry Schmehl have been here for some time, and to this colony has been added George Cartwright, Frank Hart, Peter Engleman and Jack Glick. A 75-hour go-as-you-please is being arranged to start at Arcade rink, 3133 State street, on April [illegible] and quite a number of walkers have the [illegible] end. Glasscock's double, singles by [illegible] and Luby and McDermott's fly to Ryan made the Colonels even in the second. Chicago got two men on bases in the fourth and none out, but good fielding kept them from scoring. A good bunch of runs came the next trip. Ryan retired on his fly to Shugart. Dahlen singled past short and Decker was thrown out from third. Dahlen crossed the plate on Anson's two-bagger to Clark's territory. Lange followed with a run over Shugart's head that netted three bases, and Everitt's hot grounder between Glasscock's legs enabled "Auld Lang Syne" to reach the rubber. Luby's single and McDermott's triple in the fifth gave Louisville her last run. The game was remarkable for the number of fast plays. Four of Lange's put-outs were long chases to deep center, and he was nearly lost in the horizon when his speedy throw completed a fine double play. Ryan's catch was a hard running one into Stewart's neighborhood in the face of the sun. Stewart and Donahue were "halvers" in a lightning double play on a strike out and an attempted steal. Then a double play by Stewart, Dahlen and Anson gave the spectators a touch of heart disease. O'Brien was on first when Glasscock hit toward right. Stewart headed off the ball, but as he grabbed it he fell on his side. He had hardly hit ground before he tossed the ball to Dahlen, who covered second and shot it over to Anson ahead of Glasscock. The crowd yelled itself hoarse over the play, and even the Louisville players took off their caps to him.

Witnessed by a Big Crowd.

Decker, Anson and Everitt got their share of good work. Everitt's single error in the third was redeemed a minute later by a fine one-handed stop that caught the runner and retired the side. The Colts' short and long battery work was faultless. Preston, McDermott and Shugart performed clever fielding feats for Louisville. The day was roasting hot at 85 degrees and 8,000 witnessed the contest. Score:

GALVESTON, Tex., March 31.—Despite the threatening weather, a fair-sized crowd witnessed the game to-day between the Chicago Colts and the Houston (Tex.) Southern league club. The Colts were easy victors and batted Hardy heavily, but he was saved by good support. Score:

As the Louisvilles gave Houston for home next Wednesday, they will play no more exhibition games with the Colts. That gives Anson's men the Texas championship, four out of six games. Next Sunday Chicago will play Galveston's new league team and a large crowd is expected out.

War on Sunday Games at Indianapolis.

Special to the Chicago Record.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 31.—The war on Sunday baseball was begun in ten pulpits of the city to-day. The ten leading ministers insisted that the officers of the law should enforce the statute against Sunday games. The subject will be pursued further at the monthly meeting of the Ministers' association to-morrow. Superintendent of Police Powell announces that he will arrest the players. So much opposition is being manifested that the directors of the club are thinking of abandoning playing on Sunday. The grounds fitted up for Sunday games are three miles beyond the city limits.

DISCORD IN THE TEAM.

STEWART WANTS HIS RELEASE.

Anson, It Is Said, Would Like to Put Parrott on Second Base—What Ryan Says—Pittsburg Beaten in a Good Game—Other Contests.

Just as the Chicago ball club has struck a genuine winning streak the fact has developed that there is serious dissension within the ranks of the team. Second Baseman Stewart yesterday asked for his release and "Jimmy" Ryan is exerting his great talents "on the bench." Ryan says the trouble is due to the fact that Anson has had it in for Stewart ever since the latter joined that team and began to play good ball, and that he has taken Stewart's part. Mr. Anson says the trouble is that Ryan does not do his duty, and will not discuss Stewart.

Back of all of it is supposed to be the old trouble concerning Parrott. This player is on the Chicago pay-roll; he made the eastern trip with the team, practices with the open daily, is assiduous in conforming to club rules at all times and has an undoubted knack of standing well at all times in the eyes of the veteran manager. Ryan charges that Anson has an antipathy to Stewart in the face of the fact that the latter has played great ball, and the inference drawn from this charge is that the manager longs to see Parrott playing second base.

Ryan, who was a spectator at yesterday's game, said:

"Ever since Stewart began to show good work at Dallas Anson has been picking on him and criticising him until he has made the fellow heartsick. Every man on the team sympathized with Stewart, because we all saw he was a good all-player. On this last eastern trip everybody who saw Stewart said he was going to make a star. It seems very funny to me, therefore, that Anson should keep picking on him. Because I took Stewart's part Anson got sore at me, and he has made it unpleasant for me for some time. When we got back from the east I found that my wife was still very sick, and I went to Anson and asked him to let me off from morning practice. He refused to do it, and I stayed away anyhow. I appealed to Mr. Hart, and he told me I would not have to report in the forenoons while my wife was sick."

Anson and Ryan never have got along together as smoothly as manager and player should. Trouble between them was renewed last spring in Galveston, when Ryan refused to carry the bat bag. Previous to that they had got on tolerably fair terms with each other. Whatever the secret of the present trouble, the suspicion that Anson prefers Parrott to Stewart will not make the Chicagos' manager any friends among the baseball enthusiasts.

Anson's Explanation.

Capt. Anson, in reference to Ryan's case, says the "star" right-fielder was indifferent in his spring practice when the team was south, adding the indisputable assertion that no player, no matter how good in theory, can play winning ball without practice. "Ryan has remained away from the regular morning practice," said the captain, and sent no explanation at all. He never showed up at all Sunday, and I couldn't tell why he remained away. His wife has been ill, I know, but I had no word from him saying she was too ill for him to present himself at the grounds. I would be the last person in the world to refuse a leave of absence if the player really had to remain at home to attend to sickness in his family. I think I have been reasonable with Ryan, but there is one thing sure: No matter how great a favorite he may be with Chicago patrons, I can't allow him to demoralize the team, and he can't draw pay when he is not playing, either."

Anson is well satisfied with Decker's playing in Ryan's position, and Decker plays willingly and earnestly all the time.

The captain is not at all talkative in the case of Stewart and the Parrott relationship. He says that as long as Stewart plays good ball he will remain where he is, but he wishes no excuses for "Jiggs" Parrott, taking occasion to affirm that "Parrott can play as good ball as any of 'em."

It is well known that the players do not share Anson's opinion in this respect.

Hart Stands by Anson.

President Hart, in reply to the question as to whether Stewart had asked for his release, said: "That cuts no figure; he wouldn't get it anyhow." Continuing, Mr. Hart said that Stewart had not asked for a release, and that on the contrary he was well satisfied at present, and that as for the probable quality of his ball-playing in case he should lapse into a dissatisfied vein, he could ill afford to play in any way but the best he knew how. Early in the spring Mr. Hart made a rule requiring the appearance of all the

him with also his accustomed high temper, and a great row, trying to make a scandal out of it. Dahlen was a fluke to right for Pittsburg, and both made two runs each in the remaining three innings. Score:

INJUNCTION FOR ROBY.

TRACK WILL CLOSE TO-NIGHT.

Gov. Matthews' Attorneys Secure an Order Restraining Further Racing at the Indiana Track—Management Will Not Protest—Turf News.

Special to the Chicago Record.

VALPARAISO, Ind., June 24.—This noon Senator Kopelke of Crown Point appeared before Judge John H. Gillett in chambers on behalf of the state of Indiana on the relation of Gov. Claude Matthews and asked for a temporary injunction against Edward Roby, Edward Shadd, the Roby Racing association, the Roby Breeders' association, the Hammond Fair association, John Condon, R. H. Wells, D. Hohman and all others interested whose names were unknown to the state, restraining and enjoining the said defendants and all persons in their employ and hereafter to be employed from racing or permitting any race on the Roby track. Senator Kopelke presented the order which he wanted the court to grant, which was afterward modified, and the court granted the petition and issued the order. Kopelke started this afternoon for Crown Point to place the same in the hands of Sheriff Hayes of Lake county to serve on the defendants at once. The writ is returnable on July 15, and the state officials are confident that they will secure a permanent injunction.

The order granted enjoins all the defendants in the suit and all others interested from giving any public exhibition or trial of speed or matches between animals of the horse kind wherein prizes in money are contested for by running, galloping, trotting or pacing, or from holding any race meeting within the period of thirty days after June 24 and thereafter for any longer period than fifteen days at a time, with an intermission of no less than thirty days between meetings, and not oftener than three meetings of fifteen days each in each year.

Will Stop Racing To-Day.

The order has been delivered to Sheriff Hayes and he will serve the same and stop the races to-morrow afternoon.

Another move is on foot, and it is vouched for on good authority, that an application will be made here to-morrow for a receiver for Roby and that a prominent Valparaiso attorney has already been selected. A prominent and well-known Chicago attorney was here last night for several hours and the plan of action was determined upon. He left early this morning for Indianapolis to lay the matter before Gov. Matthews. Telegrams have been received here to-night, but no information would be given out except that Roby's last race meeting had been run, as one of the most powerful organizations had been perfected in the last twenty-four hours that would close its gates forever.

TRACK RECORD FOR DAGO.

He Runs Six Furlongs at Roby in 1:15—Fifty-Pound Boy Wins a Race.

William Gallagher's black horse Dago, by Himyar-Gypsy, knocked a quarter of a second off the track record at Roby yesterday. He was in the third race along with Ben Lomond, The Rook and other fast ones, and, being handsomely ridden by Mayberry, won by a half-length. He was favorite in the race, having been backed from 5 to 2 down to 8 to 5. Fred Foster's Ben Lomond was second choice at 5 to 2. The Rook, who has won his last two outs, was heavily played at fours, and Miss Rouett, at 6 to 1, had quite a following. Simrock and Miss Rouett acted badly at the post, causing a delay of fifteen minutes, but when Dwyer gave the signal the field got away to a good start, with Simrock in front, Ben Lomond second and Miss Rouett third. The Rook, who broke fourth, had his usual turn of speed, and at the half-mile pole was two lengths to the good. He remained in front around the upper turn and well into the stretch, but opposite the paddock he began to tire. Ben Lomond and Dago passed him and fought it out to the wire. Ben Lomond seemed to be winning at the sixteenth pole, but he "dogged" when Ross drew his whip.

The other features of the afternoon were the Owners' handicap at seven furlongs and the selling race at one and one-eighth miles. G. W. Poole's Caprivi, carrying fifty-eight pounds, and ridden by the midget Hathersall, captured the handicap after a driving finish through the stretch with Abbess. Young Hathersall is perhaps the smallest rider in the business. He uses good judgment, however, and holds the horse's head up at the finish. He got off sixth with Caprivi, and rating along in the bunch until the stretch was reached made his run at the eighth pole, winning by a length. Cave Spring, badly ridden and shut off twice, was third.

The nine-furlong event furnished a pretty contest from the start. Montpenso, at 12 to 1, win-whether Stewart had asked for his release, said: "That cuts no figure, he wouldn't get it anyhow." Continuing, Mr. Hart said that Stewart had not asked for a release, and that on the contrary he was well satisfied at present, and that as for the probable quality of his ball-playing in case he should lapse into a dissatisfied vein, he could ill afford to play in any way but the best he knew how. Early in the spring Mr. Hart made a rule requiring the appearance of all the players at the hour for morning practice and a failure to comply with the same meant a loss of a half-day's pay to the player. He confirms what Anson says about the need of a man putting in an appearance for practice just as regularly as the members of the team who are not such distinct stars.

Although President Hart thus commits himself to upholding Capt. Anson's position, it is well known that the club president does not share Anson's partiality for Parrott—at least considering the misfortunes that attended Parrott's work here on the team last year and the year before.

Chicago, 8; Pittsburg, 6.

There were no evidences of internal dissension in the work of the Chicagos yesterday afternoon at the west side park. If Stewart was playing for release he did a poor job. Chicago overcame a big lead in her first meeting with the Pittsburg team and won out on pure grit and good playing, in which Stewart cut a prominent figure. The locals' only error was a dropped fly by Dahlen in the first inning, and in this instance Dahlen was responsible not so much for failing to get the ball as for preventing others from getting it. Later in the game the Pittsburg centerfielder and shortstop went after a ball exactly like that which Dahlen dropped, but both stopped and let the hit drop safe. In this instance neither got an error, which illustrates one of the incongruities of scoring and shows how misleading it is to judge a fielder's ability by his record. When Dahlen escapes errors by shirking balls he will have acquired a new method of playing the game, but an unfortunate one for his team.

The afternoon was pleasant, although threatening in advance of the contest. Three thousand people sat in the stands and showed great interest in an exciting game. Umpire Galvin came in for a lot of criticism, not much of which was deserved. Almost at the outset Anson went at him in the vain endeavor to get him to enforce the rules relating to balks and illegal delivery, both of which Hawley was apparently violating, but as these rules are practically dead letters Galvin did not feel disposed to resurrect them and Anson's shouting had little effect, except perhaps to give the crowd an exaggerated idea of Mr. Galvin's fallibility. On balls and strikes the veteran's judgment was in the main excellent, but on the bases he appeared to err twice. He called Hawley safe at first in the fourth and the decision gave Pittsburg two runs. In the fifth, however, he called Dahlen safe at second when the little runner looked clearly out, and this gave Chicago two. Dahlen has a remarkable way of sliding a fielder when diving into a base and it is possible Cross did not touch him, but from the stands this could not be told. In the fourth inning Galvin gave Lange a life because of the interference of a player, and the decision had a most important bearing on the result of the game. Galvin could not possibly have decided otherwise, although Clingman, the offending player, maintains that the interference was unintentional. However that may be, he got squarely in Lange's way when the Pittsburgs were running the latter down between bases and squarely blocked his progress, and it would have been worth Galvin's job to have failed to give the runner his base. The play was unfortunate for Pittsburg, because it prevented a certain out, and two runs followed on Everitt's timely hit.

Stratton made his first appearance after a long rest and pitched good, heady, steady ball, outgaming Hawley, who started out with a great burst of speed and show of confidence, which failed to last, although he pitched a fair game. Hawley batted viciously. His first time up found the bases full. Just then a big bouquet came sauntering down out of the grand stand, preceded by a small boy. It was presented to the Pittsburg twirler, who proceeded forthwith to clear the bases with a two-bagger. Later on he made a home run to center field. A phenomenal catch by Lange in the seventh inning was the feature of the game. After a hard run he dived head first and got a ball just off the ground. It saved at least one run and created a furore in the stands. Stewart's all-around work—especially participation in double plays—and Dahlen's fielding and batting were other features.

Neither side counted in the first inning. In the second Clingman led off with a single, but was forced out by Hecker, and Hawley's double sent Lange, Pittsburg's man across the plate. The Chicago Anson met one of Hawley's swift ones with his body and took first, going to third on Lange's hard hit down the right field line. He was caught at the plate on Everitt's sacrifice fly to Green, but a single by Stewart brought in Lange from second with the first run. The next batters were retired. Hecking started off the third with a hit, but was thrown out disgusted at his succeeding brethren. Chicago did nothing in her half and in the fourth Pittsburg made two more on singles by Clingman and Hawley (both beats) and Bierbauer's two-bagger to left center. This gave the Alleghenys men a record of 3 to 1, and it looked all over. But in the last half Lange started out with a base on balls and Pfeffer hit safe. Lange made a bluff at stealing third, but fooled Everitt instead, and the latter was caught napping between bases. The play, however, shifted the runners, and Sage the interference upon the part of Clingman came in and prevented a sure out, the runners landing on second and third, whence they scored on Stewart's triple to left center. Stratton's number, to Bierbauer left Stewart score also and Anson was out bound. Pittsburg did nothing in the fifth and Anson's men jumped to the front. Dahlen started with a single, Wilmot fouled out and Pfeffer struck out, leaving the score on Anson's number. Stratton opened the seventh with a home run, Everitt followed him by knocking out a three-bagger, Hawley's home run drive again scored things up. However, Lange got on first and, but a double play stopped Pittsburg's run getting.

MAID MARIAN IN RECORD TIME.

The Kendall Stable Mare Runs a Fast Race at St. Louis—Bill White Disabled.

Special to the Chicago Record.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 24.—A. B. Dade's consistent old horse Bill White was either out down or he broke one of his hind legs in the first race at the fair grounds to-day. He hobbled in gamely on three legs and will hardly ever race again. Dan Honig's filly Charm, favorite at 5 to 8, won the race all the way from the 20 to 1 shot, Revenue. High Test was third, the same distance behind Revenue. In the second race Laura F. got away in front and led all the way, winning handily by two lengths. Dare Dollar beat Spinola eight lengths. Maid Marian won some get-away money for the Kendall stable in the third race. She was backed at 2 to 5 and 1 to 2 and won by a head from Simmons in the fast time of 1:27 flat, the track record for seven furlongs. Flora Thornton did not start. The Kitten, in the fourth race, was beaten out a neck by the 6 to 1 chance Miss Clark. Zoulika threw her rider, Tuberville, early in the route and ran over the course riderless. Jones, with Maj. Alack Covington in the saddle, was the pick at 5 to 8 in the last race. He laid back as he always does and won out in the stretch by two lengths from Little George, who made the running. Summaries:

First race, 6 furlongs—Charm, 108 (Garner), 8 to 5, won; Revenue, 101 (Thornton), 20 to 1, second; High Test, 101 (F. Mansell), 10 to 1, third. Time, 1:16¾. Mrs. Bradshaw, Kashmere, Dominoes, Mash, George L., Uncertainty, Dunlap, George W. Bailey and Bill White also ran.

COLTS CAPTURE ANOTHER GAME

Work of the Second Baseman an Important Factor in the Result—Anson Tipped His Cap to Him—Boston Wins with Fischer Sexton.

Aside from Boston the Chicagos are playing the best ball in the big league just now. Four straight victories on home grounds against two strong clubs make a good record and show that Anson's confidence was well placed. The team is playing a good quality of ball in every way, and it begins to look as if Chicago and Boston might be the two contending factors in the long run.

University of Michigan's pitcher, Sexton, has won both of his games since joining Boston, having held Brooklyn and New York down to few hits. The St. Louis team seems to be thoroughly demoralised, and is putting up a poor game.

To-day's scheduled games are: Pittsburg in Chicago, Louisville in Cleveland, Philadelphia in Boston, New York in Baltimore, Washington in Brooklyn.

The Philadelphia-Brooklyn game yesterday at Brooklyn was one of the shortest in the history of baseball—one hour and twenty-two minutes. Short games are unusual under the present rules. Kennedy and Carney were the pitchers.

Chicago, 10; Pittsburg, 5.

A man on the street car going home from the game said he couldn't figure out how Chicago won when the Pittsburgs made more base hits and so many of the Chicagos struck out. The man across the way replied: "Well, you see, Chicago was a little more lucky in placing hits, and, besides, that man Stewart was in the game."

The first man said the Chicagos had the game won at any stage, rain or no rain; the second man said: "Yes, that's so," and they both took up the subject of "that man Stewart."

"He's a corker, ain't he?"

"That's what he is."

"I don't guess Anson or Hart will let him have his release now."

"No; and did you see Cap Anson take off his hat to him?"

"Yes, and I was glad to see such a manifestation on his part, too."

The first man remarked that he hadn't noticed Ryan in the game and the second man added that Decker took Ryan's place in right field.

Yesterday's game was possed of the features of rain, wrangling and runs, and it was so long drawn out after an intermission of fifteen minutes, during which a duststorm was allowed to

DID NOT SUPPORT MONROE

INDIANAPOLIS DEFEATED BY CHICAGO BY A SCORE OF 8 TO 4.

A Few Brilliant Plays Relieve the Monotony of An Otherwise Tiresome Game—Anson To Retire —Other Sporting News.

Every one of the 1,200 cranks that went out to yesterday's game felt as he left the park last evening as though he had lost something, but he could not just tell what it was. The crowd had gone out with the expectation of seeing Dan Monroe take the Chicago team down the line in the same manner as he did Cincinnati a week ago, and the feeling that he can still do it has not been lessened. The cranks, however, did not figure on what the other members of the team were going to do. They naturally supposed that they would co-operate with Monroe in his attempt. Possibly that was the players' intention when the game began, but early in the contest somebody turned on the wrong combination, and instead of supporting the boy as they should the Indianapolis players played base-ball like a Chinaman talks English. They used plenty of E's. In fact, their error column was the most prominent feature of their score, and the worst of it was, these mistplays occurred at the most inopportune times. Chicago could earn only one run, the others were gifts, and half a dozen men on the team vied with each other in doing the Colts honor.

Not only did Indianapolis players put up a very loose fielding game, but they were unable to hit the ball with any degree of certainty, and it was the team, not Monroe, that was responsible for the defeat. There was a very high sky, and the outfielders had a great deal of trouble. Both Hogriever and Connor misjudged balls that ordinarily would have been easy outs. The game did not compare with the exhibition with Pittsburg on Tuesday, and the Colts did not make nearly so favorable an impression as did the Pirates.

There was some clever fielding in the contest. McCormick, Stewart and Motz executed a lightning double play in the first inning, which gave promise of better things to come, but the promise was not fulfilled. Motz caught a low line drive from Dahlen's bat in the fourth inning, and completed a double play, unassisted. Big Bill Lange covered a world of ground in center field, and made several brilliant catches. The "Old Man" has not lost his batting eye, and drove out three line hits in his old-time style. Wood caught a clever game, and made a couple of pretty throws to second.

These plays relieved the monotony somewhat, and made what would have been a very tiresome exhibition a fairly interesting game. Thornton and Parker did the pitching for Chicago, and between them held Indianapolis down to five hits, of which McCormick and Wood each secured two. Tim Donohue, who was with Kansas City last year, and who was released by Manager Watkins to make room for Motz, was present, and was given a warm reception by the crowd. Anson will retire from the game at the end of this season, and will manage the Chicago team.

The score:

1890, and decide upon the dates of meetings, classes, etc. Columbus, Ft. Wayne and Indianapolis are new members, succeeding Eastern cities, which have quit on account of rigid anti-pool selling laws. The Buffalo Association is as yet undecided, the result being dependent upon the passage by the New York Senate of the pool law, which has already passed the Assembly. It is assured that upward of $225,000 will be offered in prizes on the circuit.

BOUGHT 9,600 FEET OF HOSE.

Stehlin Appointed To Succeed Foor—North Indianapolis Engine House.

The Board of Public Safety last night ordered 9,000 feet of fire hose instead of 8,700 feet, as was originally intended. The additional amount will be available for the proposed new North Indianapolis house. The orders were divided among six firms, each getting one for 1,600 feet at prices from 80 to 90 cents a foot.

The following is the list of purchases: New Jersey Car Spring and Rubber Company, "Aurora," at 80 cents, $1,280; Chicago Fire Hose Company, "National Jacket," at 80 cents, $1,280; Boston Woven Hose and Rubber Company, "Boston Fire Jacket," at 80 cents, $1,280; Fabric Fire Hose Company, "Unique," at 90 cents, $1,440; Eureka Fire Hose Company, "Eureka," at 90 cents, $1,440; Gutta-percha and Rubber Manufacturing Company, "Heavy Double Jacket," at 80 cents, $1,280.

Two members of chemical company No. 2 reported that D. R. Foor had not reported for duty since Friday. Foor has mysteriously disappeared from the city for the second time. He was dismissed from the fire department, and Oscar Stehlin was appointed. Both are Democrats.

The board recommended to the Board of Public Works the purchase of the lot at the southwest corner of Addison and Rader streets for the location of a fire department house in North Indianapolis. It was offered by H. L. Hewitt for $300. It was selected from several lots. The location of some lots offered free was not considered desirable.

Special police powers were granted to Alfred McGrinder, for Fletcher's Bank, and J. H. Gale and J. D. Crockett for the Indiana Bicycle Company.

fans were used to, but it was baseball.

Watkins' infield had Kelley, Bill Fox, Flynn, and Hickey. Hogriever, Harry Ba and William Shannon were the outfielders. Heydon returned as catcher. Barne

Watkins couldn't afford too many pitchers. But he didn't need Barnes. The team jumped out to a 23-8 mark. Grand Rapids stayed close until the franchise wa shifted to Wheeling. Then Louisville took a turn, but by then Indianapolis had a 43-18 record and a seven-game lead.

Despite the winning record, attendance was a problem. In the first 30 home games, the average crowd was less than 400.

On July 11, Watkins was forced to give up the team. He sold the franchise to buyers from Matthews, Indiana, a town of about 2,500, who were trying to make a name for their town as a shipping and transportation center. The team was 46-26 when it was sold. As the Matthews franchise, it finished at 56-78 in sixth place.

For Indianapolis fans, the 1901 team represented the third failed franchise in less than 10 years. But with the formation of the American Association on November 29, 1901, baseball would no longer be in doubt in Indianapolis.

CHAPTER IV
Indianapolis Joins The American Association

Billy Watkins must have been certain of one thing before the start of the 1902 season: it would be important for Indianapolis to make a good accounting of itself in the newly formed American Association. Otherwise, there was good reason to believe that professional baseball in the city might be lost forever.

The American Association, composed of teams from Minneapolis, St. Paul, Louisville, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Toledo, Columbus and Indianapolis, promised to be a better league and Watkins set about to field a competitive team in 1902 with a mixture of former major league performers and some promising young ballplayers. Among the veterans were Second Baseman William Fox, who had played for Washington and Cincinnati; Catcher Mike Heydon, formerly of Baltimore, Washington and St. Louis and Outfielder George Hogriever, who played with Cincinnati and Milwaukee in the American League.

The team opened its season on April 23 with a parade from the Grand Hotel to Washington Park, where a crowd estimated at nearly 4,000 watched as the locals came from behind to beat the Milwaukee Brewers, 5-4. The club stayed competitive through June, either in third or fourth place. On July 1, they took over second place and began a frantic chase of league-leading Louisville. It wasn't until September 6 that the locals moved into a first place tie with the Colonels. The tie prevailed until September 22, the last day of the season. Louisville won a doubleheader from Minneapolis and with a favorable ruling of a disputed game against Indianapolis on August 25, the Colonels would have won the pennant by two percentage points.

Watkins, however, was not to be denied. He insisted that his team play its final doubleheader of the season against St. Paul as well as an earlier rained out game. The result: Indianapolis won all three games and won the pennant by 10 percentage points. Professional baseball was finally here to stay in Indianapolis.

As might be expected, Louisville fans were not too happy with the turn of events at the end of the 1902 season and consequently they were none too friendly when Indianapolis went there for opening day in 1903. The park was crowded with patrons, some of whom stood in front of the rightfield bleachers. Indianapolis took an early 2-0 lead and appeared to be on their way to victory when the Colonels came to bat in the bottom of the ninth.

With a runner on base, Fred Odwell hit a flyball deep into rightfield. As the sportswriter for the Louisville Courier-Journal explained, "Ablaze with the feeling of victory, the occupants of the grandstand and bleacher were on their feet instantly. If this ball went safe the score would be tied. Half a hundred men in that little group in rightfield made a rush for the ball as it descended.

"(George) Hogriever, the Indianapolis rightfielder, running like the wind, was almost under the sphere when a tall man shied his derby hat at the bunch of leather and yarn. He missed the descending object by the fraction of an inch, but this was enough to prevent Hogriever's hands from touching the ball, and it fell into the crowd.

oust four pro-Johnson owners. His case went before the Board of Arbitration which had the power to decide over all minor league matters. Brush was a member of that board and this conflict of interest did not sit well with other National League owners. They gave Brush an ultimatum: get out of the minors or get off the board. So, ironically, it was Brush who was forced to sell his minor league stock.

During that winter, Watkins put together the human pieces of a jigsaw puzzle that would result in Indianapolis' greatest Western League team. A healthy Bill Phillips returned, while 34-year-old veteran Frank Foreman came from Cincinnati and Hoosier Jot Goar was purchased from Pittsburgh. Motz and Stewart anchored first and second. Billy Grey, after two years in Cincinnati, was at third. Frank Eustace, one of two players purchased from Louisville, was at short. Herm McFarland joined Hogriever and McCarthy in the outfield and Mike Kahoe came from Cincinnati to catch.

A leg injury to McCarthy and Eustace's inability to hit contributed to a slow start for a second straight year. Entering July, it became a three-team race in 1897 with Indianapolis, Columbus and St. Paul. Shortstop was still a problem, but Dibby Flynn, obtained the year before for McCormick, was a solid utility man.

Indianapolis began August with an 11-game winning streak, took a breath, and then ran a 13-game streak before losing again. In August and September, their record was 43-10, a winning percentage of .811. Overall, the team's record was 98-37, a percentage of .726. In comparison, a team playing a major league 162 game schedule would have to win 117 games to equal that achievement.

The locals won three of five postseason games against Columbus before the series ended by mutual consent. Each player pocketed about $75 for participating.

The turnover in personnel began at the top in 1898 as Manager Watkins left to take over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Joining him on the team were Jack McCarthy and Billy Grey. Veteran National League Shortstop Bob Allen was hired as player-manager.

The team got off to a quick start, winning 16 of its first 18 games. However, the locals were never able to pull away. After a July 4 doubleheader, their 38-24 record was good for only a half game lead over St. Paul. In August, the Indians began to flounder and found themselves five games off the pace, now set by Kansas City.

In September, led by Phillips and Scott, the team made one last attempt with a 13-3 run. It all came down to a season-ending three-game series with Kansas City, who led the league by 2½ games. Phillips won the opening game, but a storybook finish was not to be for Indianapolis, as Kansas City won the final two games.

Bob Allen's second year as manager in 1899 saw almost the same lineup. Motz, Stewart, Allen, and Hickey were in the infield. Tom Fleming joined Hogriever and McFarland in the outfield. Kahoe was catching. Win Kellum and Indianapolis native Eustace Newton joined Foreman and Scott on the mound.

The club floundered around the .500 mark for the first month and a half, which should not have surprised too many Indianapolis fans used to the club's history of slow starts and fast finishes. The highlight was Newton's no-hitter against Milwaukee.

In late June, the club got some more consistent offense with the signing of Outfielder Topsy Hartzell, who replaced the slumping Fleming. The locals won 12 straight in late July, for a 50-30 mark. Scott put together a 13-game winning streak, while the veterans Hogriever, Motz, and McFarland contributed solid hitting.

In the next to the last series of the season, Indianapolis hosted Minneapolis with only a few percentage points separating them. After splitting the first two games, Scott tossed a 9-0 shutout to take the lead, and two days later, Newton took on the ironman role, pitching both games of a doubleheader, winning 9-1 and 2-1, to give Indianapolis its third pennant in five years.

Indianapolis' fine record in the Western League was soon to be overshadowed by the team's demise a year later. Ban Johnson wanted to expand the Western League into a major league, and, as a first step, the league was renamed. Ironically, Indianapolis Club President W.F.C. Golt made the motion to change the name to the American League. The league then moved teams into Cleveland and Chicago.

Billy Watkins, who had been dismissed as manager of the Puttsburgh club, purchased the remaining stock in the Indianapolis club and became its principal owner.

One of Watkins' first moves was to establish a new baseball park on Washington Street near Rural. The Ohio Street park used throughout the 1890s was converted into residential properties.

Watkins also was able to secure some major league veterans for his 1900 team as the National League had decided the previous winter to reduce from twelve to eight teams. Among the players Watkins acquired were Infielders Mike Kelley (Louisville), George Magoon (Chicago), and Artie Madison (Pittsburgh); Outfielder Ralph Seybold (Cincinnati); Catcher Mike Powers (Washington) and Pitchers Jim Gardner (Pittsburgh) and Fred Barnes (Milwaukee).

The locals put together a 14-2 streak early in the season and on June 16 found themselves four games in front with a 29-14 mark, the 29th win being a no-hitter by Win Kellum against Chicago. But it was this same Chicago team that then took charge and seven games later, passed the Indians.

A series of injuries helped to blunt any sustained drive for the team. They ended the season in third with a 71-64 record.

During the winter of 1900-1901, American League owners decided to reorganize and move East to directly challenge the National League. The big question was what was going to happen in Indianapolis. The team was in an uncomfortable position, considering John Brush's long association with the club, and his perennial conflicts with Ban Johnson.

Watkins decided to ally himself with Brush and the National Leaguers. He led the formation of an American Association, which was to be a rival to the American League. But those plans were dashed in February when a seventh and eighth franchise could not be finalized and the promised financial help from the National League dried up.

of the Indianapolis Sentinel was so dumbfounded that he suspected his Fort Wayne correspondent of not telling the truth. The editor sent telegrams to several prominent Fort Wayne residents, who eventually confirmed the victory.

At the start of the season, league owners decided to divide league play into two seasons so if a team did badly at the beginning of the season, it had a chance to redeem itself. The Hoosiers finished the first half with 12 wins and 31 loses, the worst in the league.

But the Hoosiers never really got a second chance. The team's first game of the "second season" against Milwaukee was rained out. A week later, league owners met in Chicago and voted to disband. The rainy weather, missed games, and the resulting loss of fan interest doomed this second attempt at professional baseball in Indianapolis in the 1890s. But it did lead to one of the most unusual of baseball team names — the Rainmakers.

In 1893, Indianapolis followed a practice prevalent in other towns of that era and fielded a semi-pro team to represent them. The city's collection of All-Stars, also known simply as "The Team," played in Irvington and faced teams from Vincennes, Kokomo and Fort Wayne as well as other Midwestern cities. To promote player as well as fan interest, the winning team was awarded gate receipts after both teams split the first $200.

In November, Indianapolis joined a newly organized Western League with teams from Sioux City, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Toledo, Grand Rapids, Detroit and Milwaukee. John Brush became the local club's majority stockholder, while Bill Sharsig was named manager.

Ban Johnson, an acerbic Cincinnati sports columnist, was elected president of the new league, and both he and Brush would develop a running feud that would continue throughout the decade.

The Indianapolis team started slowly in 1894, winning only eight of its first 26 games. One problem was poor pitching. One of the club's first replacements was 37-year-old Abner Dalrymple, who began playing major league ball in 1878.

Brush also came to the rescue, sending three players from his Cincinnati team: First Baseman Frank Motz, Catcher Con Murphy and Pitcher George Cross. They, along with the addition of another Cincinnati import, Outfielder Jack McCarthy, helped the team reach a high point of 38-38. But when the Reds recalled Cross, Indianapolis was left with only two pitchers, Bill Phillips and Bill Pepper.

They then signed Pitcher Bill Whitrock, but the Grand Rapids club already claimed him, so Ban Johnson refused to let Whitrock play in Indianapolis. Brush didn't let that stop him. He simply signed Whitrock to a Cincinnati contract, then assigned him to Indianapolis.

Johnson, already angered at Brush for sending players to Indianapolis, refused to accept this deal, leaving Indianapolis with two arm-weary pitchers. As a result, the team ended the season in fifth place with a 61-62 record. Bill Pepper, however, pitched in one extraordinary game, going all the way in a 33-23 win over Minneapolis, in a game that lasted only two hours and 25 minutes.

In 1895, W.H. "Billy" Watkins, who had managed the 1885 Indianapolis team in the Western League, returned to the city to become the club's new manager. He received a pre-season present from Brush: Pitchers Cross, Whitrock and Chauncey Fisher; Infielders Motz and Jimmy Canavan and Outfielder McCarthy. In short, Brush was providing a talent nucleus to the team to insure its success. It worked. The team got off to a 28-15 start and had a six-game lead.

Outfielder Marty Hogan, in particular, unsettled other teams with his speed, stealing six bases against Toledo in one game. As a pre-game attraction, the team would stage 100-yard dashes between Hogan and other notable athletes.

Under the hot July sun, Indianapolis' lead began to dwindle, as an onrushing Kansas City ballclub caught up and then passed the locals by a half game. But John Brush was ready.

He sent down Bill Phillips and George Hogriever, the star outfielder of the 1894 champions, Sioux City. An angry Kansas City press referred to the team as "Cincinapolis." Ban Johnson tried to stop the transfer, but Brush, who spent his summers in Indianapolis, personally presented the umpire with the players' releases from his boxseat at the ball park.

With these exceptional reinforcements (Phillips finished 12-4 and Hogriever hit .402), Indianapolis steadily pulled away and won the pennant with a 79-43 record, six games ahead of St. Paul and seven ahead of Kansas City.

Spring training weather for Indianapolis during the 1890s usually consisted of cold winds and snow, but that did not deter Manager Watkins. He would begin spring practice sessions with long walks, runs, and light throwing. Watkins was an experienced master at striking a balance between being prepared to play and not rushing players into an injury.

His 1896 squad boasted the return of Outfielders Hogriever, Hogan and McCarthy. Motz and Fred Roat returned to the infield, along with newcomer Ace Stewart, a scrappy second baseman from Terre Haute and Third Baseman William McCormick. An old face from the 1880's, Dick Buckley, returned to handle the catching chore, while Phillips, Cross, Billy Dammann, and Dannie Monroe looked like a formidible pitching corps. Monroe was especially strong, winning eight of his first nine games until a drinking problem ended his season.

The league champs started slowly, barely breaking even in their first 23 games, 16 of which were on the road. An unhappy McCormick was sent to Chicago, and Brush helped by sending down Pitcher Wiley Davis and Third Baseman Frank Schiebeck. The team won 36 of its next 49 games and was comfortably in first place at the halfway mark.

A season-ending knee injury to Bill Phillips, however, started a slide, pushing the Indians into second place behind Minneapolis. Frustrations set in. George Cross, angered by his teammates' lack of support during a game, threw the ball into the grandstand three times. The team finished second with a respectable 78-54 record, but lost to Minneapolis in a post-season series, four games to two.

After the season, the Brush-Johnson conflict turned into open warfare. Because of irregularities in granting Western League franchises, Brush tried to train to the East and often occurred while Manager Spence slept in another compartment. One report said Team President John Brush even went East on one occasion to see for himself what was going on with the players.

Whatever it was, the Hoosiers showed little improvement over the rest of the season, with the exception of July, when they briefly moved into sixth place. By the end of the month, though, they were back in seventh place.

In August, the club released Otto Shomberg after he refused to be sold to another club. They also were said to be having disciplinary problems with Esterbrook.

The Hoosiers ended the year with a 50-85 mark, two more wins than the hapless Washington club, who finished last in the eight-team league. The team also had won 13 more games then it had done during its first season in the National League.

Despite this modest improvement, the rumor about Spence being replaced did become true and Frank Bancroft was chosen to take over the club.

Pitching had been a problem for the Hoosiers during their first two seasons and as the 1889 season began, Manager Bancroft tried to solve that problem by adding Charlie Getzein and future Hall of Famer Amos Rusie to his roster. These new arms, however, could only do so much to help the team, which continued to struggle on the field.

By July 1, the Hoosiers had won only 19 of their first 50 games. In late July, Bancroft was fired and Jack Glasscock became a player-manager. Under Glasscock, the club managed to move into sixth place at one point in August before it fell back into seventh place. The Hoosiers ended the season at home on Oct. 5, beating Washington, 15-6, before only 200 fans in what was to be their last game in the National League.

Glasscock became the only manager of the six the Hoosiers hired who had a winning record. Under him, the team won 34 games while losing 33. He also contributed on the field, leading the league in hits with 205.

Although the Hoosiers continued to show improvement, their fate in the National League became endangered during the winter of 1889 when the players, upset at what they were being paid, decided to form their own Players League.

The National League owners were determined not to let this new league succeed and in the early spring of 1890, they decided to meet the challenge head-on by fielding teams in only those cities where the Players League had formed a team. As a result, Indianapolis, over the objections of its owners, was voted out of the National League.

A promising tradition of professional baseball in Indianapolis now appeared to be in jeopardy.

CHAPTER III
Baseball In Doubt

When Indianapolis lost its National League team in the spring of 1890, Club President John Martin moved quickly to find another league. But as the baseball season began in April, Martin still hadn't met with any success.

In May, rumors circulated that Pittsburgh of the National League would move to Indianapolis, or that the city would field a team in the Indiana State League. Finally, in late May, the last place Galesburg, Illinois team of the Interstate League provided the city with an opportunity for baseball. The team played teams from Burlington, Evansville, Terre Haute, Quincy and Peoria, and had compiled a dismal 6-27 record. Before moving to Indianapolis, though, Peoria "raided" the franchise of some of its best players. Indianapolis did manage to supplement the roster with some local stars and players from a failed Texas league.

Their opening game loss in Indianapolis on June 3 before 700 fans proved a discouraging omen. Poor pitching and weak hitting over the next month led to an 11-40 mark. On July 8, the franchise was turned back to the league. Barely a month later, the league itself folded.

As the 1891 season was about to begin, Martin again found himself scurrying to find a league for Indianapolis. He spent hundreds of dollars in telegrams, trying to find players to play in the city. His effort failed and baseball fans in Indianapolis had to settle for business-sponsored teams in several commercial baseball leagues that summer. Even without a team, professional baseball news did occur here. On a cold mid-December day, the National League and the American Association, major league rivals, combined into a single 12-team National League under an agreement signed, ironically enough, in Indianapolis.

The city's baseball fortunes appeared brighter in the spring of 1892 when Indianapolis joined the Western League along with teams from Kansas City, Columbus, Milwaukee, Omaha, Toledo, Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The club moved to a newly built park on East Ohio Street where the shortest distance from home plate to the fence, boasted one director, would be 469 feet!

Lending his support to this new team was John T. Brush. Although he had moved on to become the principal owner of the Cincinnati Reds, Brush was always willing to return to Indianapolis and offer his advice to local club owners.

William Harrington, one of the baseball transients of that era, but a manager with impressive credentials, was hired to manage the local club, who were known as the Hoosiers. As the team started spring practice, Mother Nature got in the way. It began to rain . . . and rain . . . and rain in early April. The team was able to play only four exhibition games and this lack of practice contributed to an 0-8 record in April.

As the club returned home winless in early May, they already had nine rainouts. The home stand was to be 12 games long, but 11 were rained out. The only game played was in Fort Wayne because Sunday baseball was not allowed in Indianapolis. When the Hoosiers won 3-0 over St. Paul, the editor team. When Birmingham gave Jackson Montgomery during the middle of the season this was done on the understanding that Birmingham would have the pick of the Jackson club at the end of the year and choose one man. Pitcher Robinson was selected and will go to the Southern leaguers.

In games won and lost Nolly led all the pitchers in the league last year with a percentage of .766, having worked in a total of 34 games, winning 23, losing 7 and tieing 4. Blackburn of Vicksburg, who took his turn regularly in the box, save a short time in the early part of the season when he essayed to cover first, finished second in the pitchers' race with a percentage of .678. Christman of Jackson was virtually third with .666 and pitched more games than either of the leaders, Blackburn having worked in 28 and Christman 39.

Ryan of Gulfport faced more opposing batters than any of the other stabmen, with 1,556 to his credit. Opposing batsmen also secured more hits off Ryan than any other pitcher, getting 335 during the season. Ryan also distinguished himself by getting more strikeouts to his credit than any other pitcher, earning 220. His closest competitor in this respect was Billiard of Meridian with 214. Wheeler of Columbus issued the most passes during the year's play, with 113 to his credit. Yount of Meridian and Vicksburg was a close second with 111. No other twirler issued as many as 100. Yount lead with 18 wild pitches and Wheeler, consistently, was second with 13. Ryan of Gulfport hit the most batters, 34. Ryan and Wheeler had 125 runs apiece made from their pitching, these pitchers leading in this line.

Batters who hit .300 were few and far between. No man who played the whole season reached the coveted mark. Excepting those players who participated in only a couple of games, Collins, who later jumped the Columbus club and who is to be tried by Memphis in 1908, lead with .367 per cent. Montgomery of Jackson, however, played almost three times as many games as Collins, 94, and came second with .340. No other man has a right to a place above the .300 dead line save Campbell of Columbus, who batted at .313, and Gear of Mobile, who finished with .309. Campbell played 42 games and Gear

...00 Added to List of Victims of High Water—Rescue Work Is Progressing Slowly.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 18.—The ... on the main line levee of the Mississippi yesterday four miles below ... Miss., and on the Arkansas ... added 25,000 persons to the list of flood sufferers in southern Arkansas, northern Louisiana and northwestern Mississippi, the yellow flood inundating an area of rich cotton country almost as large as the New England states.

The plight of thousands of homeless people is pitiable. Hundreds are marooned in isolated places. Many have been without food for days and scores are suffering for want of clothing.

Officials of the national government have combined forces with state officials to carry relief to as many as possible. The need of motor boats and skiffs to be used in rescuing persons in trees and from house tops is extreme, and all available craft has been bought or chartered by the officials.

The water is rising rapidly at Tallulah, La. Rescue officials are trying to carry the inhabitants to Milliken's land, where a temporary refugee camp will be established. This camp is to be protected by the national guard.

Urgent appeals from more than 5,000 persons have been received from Vicksburg, where a large camp will be established immediately under the protection of the Mississippi national guard.

All roads are all out of commission in the inundated territory and supplies are being distributed only by boats.

DELTA TOWNS IN PATH

Flood Spreads Over Vast Stretch of Fertile Land.

GREENVILLE, Miss., April 18.—Flood waters rushing through a rapidly widening breach in the Mississippi river dike near the town of Beulah, Miss. are spreading over the fertile delta lands today. Practically the entire south half of Bolivar county is inundated and the water will flood the counties of Sunflower, Washington and Issaquanay. Benoit, Dahomey, Cleveland, Pace, Shaw, Choctaw, Leland and Rolling Fork are the larger towns in the path of the overflow.

Gasoline launches were sent from this city and Rosedale early to begin the exploration of the inundated territory in search of refugees. If any lives are lost, it is believed the number will be small, as preparations for flight had been made at all the important towns.

The crevasse in the levee occurred late last night on the Hughes plantation in Bolivar county, four miles south of Beulah and about forty miles north of Greenville. When the embankment gave way 150 feet of the earth works disappeared. This morning the gap is almost a thousand feet wide.

LOUIS P. MONNINGER.

The funeral of Louis P. Monninger, Sr., 56 years old, who died Tuesday morning, was held at 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the late residence, 1302 North Seventh street. Burial was in Woodlawn cemetery. Mr. Monninger was born in Terre Haute and lived here all of his life, being active in business. With his brothers, Gerhardt and Herbert, he conducted a business which grew to large proportions. Recently the brothers sold their interests in the business to Louis P. Monninger, jr., and Philip H., who now conduct it.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

ASA STEWART.

After several months illness from rheumatism and a complication of diseases, Asa Stewart, 43 years old, one of Terre Haute's best known veterans of the diamond, died Wednesday afternoon at the home of his sister, Miss Lulu Stewart, at 517 South Thirteenth and One-half street. The old time fans took up a collection at once for a floral tribute.

Stewart began his career in the back lot bunch of bare-legged lads more than twenty years ago and was an active figure in the making of history of the national game. He had a fling in the big leagues and then back into the minor leagues.

The first playing was on good local teams on Sundays, after working in the rolling mills through the week. His playing early attracted the attention of Adrian C. Anson. He played second and captained the Anson Colts one season. Later he was captain of Omaha in the Western league under O'Rourke. He induced Mordecai Brown to accompany him to the western city against the will of the local management and was credited with Brown's great success in the Western league, and his rapid rise to the major organization.

Stewart was born and reared on a farm near Terre Haute. Age and rheumatism forced him from the national game, after which he returned to this city, where he tended bar, served on the police force and worked in the Highland mills at various periods. He leaves a sister and three brothers, Harry, of Indianapolis, and Edward and Charles of this city.

The funeral will be held from the late residence at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. Burial will be in Highland Lawn cemetery.

JESSE L. CLUTTER.

Word has been received here of the death in El Paso, Texas, of Jesse D. Clutter, youngest son of Oliver F. Clutter, of South Twenty-first street. He was born Sept. 29, 1877, at Mt. Vernon, Ill. Besides his father, he is survived by one sister, Mrs. Thomas Bird, of Oklahoma, and a brother, Oliver F. Clutter, jr. His remains will be brought to the home of his aunt, Mrs. M. C. Laughead, 211 Chestnut street, but the arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

WILLIAM J. GODSCHALK.

The funeral of William J. Godschalk will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence, Thirteenth and Wheeler streets. Mr. Godschalk, who was 38 years old, died suddenly Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. He was a member of the Bartenders union, and until recently was connected with the W. P. Clay saloon on South Fourth street. He is survived by a widow and four small children. Burial will be at Highland Lawn.

...days Great ... Not Effective of New Laws, But Impartial Enforcement of Present Ones.

The opening session of the three days' convention of the state organization of the Building Trades' Council was addressed Thursday by men of note in the industrial and business world of Indiana. The sessions are being held in the Building Trades' hall at 624½ Wabash avenue.

Edgar A. Perkins, president of the State Federation of Labor; J. J. Walsh, factory inspector; Mayor Louis Gerhardt, Adolph Herz, president of the Terre Haute Commercial club; Rev. O. O. Inman, president of the Terre Haute Ministerial association, were among those who spoke.

Mr. Perkins made a strong talk, endorsing any actions of the labor organizations that tend to the uplift of the moral and physical well being of mankind. He said the American Federation of Labor had never done a better thing than its establishment of the departmental system. He said he had been present at the first meeting of the Building Trades Council when it was still an experiment, and compared organized labor to a child in its first efforts at locomotion, saying that it must creep before it can walk.

Out of Creeping Stage.

"Organized labor is just passing out of its creeping stage," he said, "and is being confronted with one of the biggest questions that it has yet been confronted with. It is a deep question, and is not one so much of how much can we secure from the employer, as of how we can maintain our strong internal organization as a force in the industrial world in the face of the diverisfied opinions of members of the organization. A radical change of doctrine is expounded by some, because some of the members think that we are making too little progress to the desired goal.

"We must hold organized labor steadfast to the principles on which it is founded. It has brought to us many benefits and many more are to come. I indorse without equivocation the work of the Terre Haute Ministerial association in its attempt to hold before the labor organizations a high standard of principles. Organized labor has done much to increase the morals of mankind.

"Especially in increasing the moral uplift of our own people has it done wonders. Not so many years ago the condition of the worker was almost identical with that of a beast. He knew nothing but work and sleep. The good things of life were denied him. The moral standard of the worker then cannot be compared with that of today. When the hours of work were reduced and the remuneration increased, the moral standards of the men who do the work of the country were advanced.

Dangers Ahead.

"It may be, as some seem wont to point out, that the further development
